Five of Hearts:

Passionate Experiences

Characteristics: If they ever want to bring about any long-term success in their lives, all Fives must settle down some, and the Five of Hearts is not an exception. These individuals have, according to their Karma Card an issue with security that will remain in their lives until they come to grips with it. Finances are usually the nature of their security fear. Sticking with a single goal and hard work bring success every time. Whether or not they are able to remain in one location long enough to enjoy the rewards is the question. It is often not easy for them, but a lot of them do, even though it does not come naturally. Some Five of Hearts are incapable of making commitments at all and are promiscuous. Traveling and visiting foreign lands sometimes fills their need for new experiences. They gain the new experiences they are looking for in this way. The Hearts suit is also related to home and family, in addition to symbolizing relationships. To fulfill their need for new and novel experiences, the Five of Hearts may establish new homes and friendships in foreign countries. The Five of Hearts Saturn card in their Life Path makes them restless to a degree beyond that of the other Fives. Their Life Path has few even-numbered cards whatsoever. This tells us that there is a creativity and usually a restlessness in the Five of Hearts. They frequently express an artistic talent in the things they do around the home with loved ones or even professionally. Everything that love and money have to offer is the experience that the Five of Hearts wants. If one is stuck in one place at the same job for long periods; a job that means travel is often the solution. It is just fine with them if they are traveling all the time. They are willing to travel extensively and go almost anywhere. Since they are in search of fresh and different relationships, the Five of Hearts is on a mission of a kind. Their present relationship is most often just another experience for them. They want to know and experience something if they actually stay married for any duration of time. There is something of importance in the relationship. They may just continue on without any hesitation; they have received what they have of something. This could be an individual or the emotions they experience from them.

Relationships: The Life Path of the Five of Hearts also contains a powerful Venus card, but they also like variety in personal relationships. They also have a love of creativity and artistic expression and an attraction to those who are similar. Many just feel a need for more than a single partner, and the grass will always seem greener in other places. Ending relationships for the Five of Hearts is often bitter and hard. It is frequently scarred by rage and resentment. Represented by Mars, it is rare that they are the winners in divorce unless they release all of their personal wishes. Many elect to never take that gamble again and remain single for the rest of their lives after experiencing one of these difficult breakups. At some point in their life they become aware that they need some autonomy in their love life because the Five of Hearts is by nature somewhat restless in matters of romance. Other cards that appreciate the same individuality that they do can lead to a successful relationship. The Five of Hearts, like other Fives, frequently has an internal fear of commitment, believing it is something that will take away their freedom of movement. The majority are happiest remaining single, or minimally, in a relationship that provide them lots of room and freedom. They can be happily married in some case if the basics are met for them.

Personality Connections: Younger Club men attract Five of Hearts women but they can probably have a better relationship with a Diamond man. A Diamond woman and a Five of Hearts man can make a good marriage. Spade females can be friends.

Confrontations: Any student of the cards can think of what some of those manifestations might be. A sign of a divorce is the Five of Hearts in a Yearly Spread. This does not necessarily mean that the Five of Hearts individual is always headed for a divorce. There are more than a single way to unfold the cards found in Yearly Spreads. The energies of our Birth Cards and the Five of Hearts individual are not an exception.
