Seven of Clubs:

Cosmic Observation

Characteristics: As highly spiritual cards Sevens need to turn this spirituality from a negative into accomplishment and personal autonomy. One trouble following another in their life comes about until they do this, because of the Seven's influence. Always resting in the negative areas of the mind, namely, worry, pessimism and doubt, is the Seven of Clubs challenge. If they do not follow their very high-level inborn inspirations and insights, Saturn's bearing brings despair and even depression. Their thoughts cause almost all of the issues they experience. More than the other cards in the deck; the Seven of Clubs has a major duty to keep positive as well as healthy thoughts. Spiritual thought of any kind is sure to be a positive force, as are strong ideals. The Seven of Clubs challenge, among other things, is developing honesty and integrity. This is the result of their Jack of Clubs Karma Card, which is often nicknamed

The Thief. Love and family will pay a price in the event that they let their need for success overcome their character. They have to apply themselves in a good fashion so they have the power to deal with their issues and to gain the fame and respect they secretly desire. Frequently they spend the large amounts of money they will probably acquire as fast as it comes in. Managing money is not something they are good at. They look for those who have power in others as a result of their Karma Card. They are good at getting a bargain, but bad at holding onto money.

Relationships: The Jack of Clubs is more successful financially and always functions better if they are married and will eventually make that commitment. Issues for the men come from the Jack of Clubs Karma Card. A kind of flamboyant self-perception of an actor or great romantic person is how many of them see themselves. Promiscuity and deceit can result from this. For this reason they can be promiscuous and deceiving. Anything that will help them feel special, including extramarital affairs, is what many Seven of Clubs desire most. They are more tempted with indecision in their personal lives and choosing a partner if they actually do become famous. Multiple marriages can result frequently. The karma of the Seven of Clubs individual is neither bad nor good karma as far as love is concerned. It is how their life in general is dealt with that makes the determination of their personal love story. If they are diligent, the positive news is that they have more opportunities than any other card to acquire mastery of their emotional and romantic involvements. Determining how to release personal attachments to others or create a positive perspective about their partner as well as the remainder of their lives is involved with their karma.

Personality Connections: Female Seven of Clubs tend to hold fantasies about other Club men and are greatly challenged by Diamond males, represented by their Jack of Clubs Pluto card. A male Spade might be the perfect match for a female Seven of Clubs. The Seven of Clubs has a special connection with Spade women or women who are hard-working and determined, regardless of suit.

Confrontations: There are sometimes major mood swings in Seven of Clubs persons, who can first be jovial and not long later, worried and depressed. Perhaps we can use a famous couple to illustrate some of this. Bill and Hillary Clinton seem like the ideal couple. In the Ordinary Spread the Seven of Clubs and Nine of Clubs are located right next to each other. Already we can see a good marriage connection, but there is even more. Sitting right in front of the Seven of Clubs is the Nine of Clubs. This translates as the Nine of Clubs being the Moon Card to the Seven of Clubs and the Seven of Clubs the Mercury Card to the Nine of Clubs. If the individual in the rear allows the person in the front to be the leader in a relationship, this can be a good combination. During Bill Clinton's presidency, Hillary was perfectly happy supporting him and allowing him, apparently, to take the leadership role. Those who support them can provide the items necessary they need to do their jobs. This is extremely important. Hillary gives Bill a feeling of structure and foundation coming from her semi-fixed Scorpio. Bill is Leo, Seven of Clubs, and destined to go through the positives and negatives in terms of confidence.
