King of Clubs:

Adept of Doctrine

Characteristics: Escapism, for a lot of King of Clubs, centers around substance abuse in the form of drugs, alcohol or something else. They perhaps had a childhood that had many challenges such that they are often very emotionally sensitive. They are often pulled in the opposite of their highest potential. In a journey to understand and deal with inner conflicts, the King of Clubs can go through many trials and tribulations in life. They usually have an awakening sometime in their thirties and go onto acquire the recognition, power and responsibility that is their birthright. The King of Clubs can be an expert in any field they choose because they sit at the peak of the suit symbolizing knowledge and communication. Previous lives provide this knowledge and they have direct access to it. Their own philosophy and values are almost always respected and they live their lives. They seem to be able to tap knowledge from a high source any time they want to. Living by their own truth, they are found in many types of occupations. Very frequently, they occupy positions of responsibility. They are highly intuitive in their approach to life and this makes them the most psychic card in the deck. Marriage can be a big challenge as can the periodic habit of getting into a rut of comfort and not motivating themselves to their highest potential. Regret in their later years can take place if their full potential of giving to the world is not realized. Regardless of what they do, they are respected for their work. Some highly successful artists, leaders and other creative individuals in the world are King of Clubs. They are clever and personable in character, meaning they are usually popular and well thought of. The majority of King of Clubs will be in partnerships because they seem to do their best job with a partner. One of their greatest assets is the ability to logically analyze things and categorize well.

Relationships: There is a need to make minute distinctions between subjective truths and their dreams of romantic or marital happiness with men and women King of Clubs alike. They have an internal fortitude and are powerful people who make fine mental distinctions. Those who are involved with these individuals have to be able to handle this strength and power without becoming defensive, which is quite difficult in many instances. For this reason, the women are, therefore, likely to be more masculine in their approach and sometimes domineering. Finding a partner can consequently be difficult at times; particularly one with whom they can be themselves. Other cards have issues around the notion of freedom, but it does not prevent them from getting married or settling down. In terms of marriage, sex or children they sometimes face challenges. As far as the King of Clubs goes, the Pluto Card can show itself in many ways, but there is always some obstacle related to it in the lives of the female King of Clubs. A life-long transformation and its ramifications are important to them. Men King of Clubs generally attract females who personify some of the negative traits of the Queen, in particular, the escapist, indolent or self-indulgent ones. The feeling of being emotionally close is something the King of Clubs possesses. In addition their marriage karma is basically good. There are, however, portions of matrimony that are very difficult for them. Fear of losing their personal autonomy is definitely one of the major challenges in a marriage. Freedom treasured above everything, is obviously an important concept for the King of Clubs. Sometimes it is more important than anything, including a happy relationship.

Personality Connections: Clubs are generally friends with them and there is often a mentoring relationship involved here. Diamonds get along with both men and women King of Clubs but have challenges with Hearts, with the exception being the King. They are always a good connection.

Confrontations: Regardless of how small it is, they are not satisfied unless it is perfect. They can be a stickler for details and, in their mind, there has to be a reason for everything. There is, therefore, kind of an endless quest for perfection. All King of Clubs make distinctions about everything. They are extremely sensitive to things that others hardly think about. They are, in essence, perfectionists and are not at ease until every small detail has been done to perfection.
