

Birth Cards: Threes

Three is an odd numbered card and like all such cards the Ace must be understood. The Ace has moved beyond zero. It is the prime of all the odd-numbered cards. All reflect some qualities of the Ace. As odd, the cards are a step outside being stable, which the preceding even cards have. The Three has stepped away from the Two. This causes dissatisfaction with what they have which is strong in their personal relationships. It is not a bad thing or a negative. Rather it is a fact. Everyone, being human, will at one time or another know what it is like to be a Three in this regard. We may have a Three of Hearts Long Range Card in one particular year and experience a great deal of variety or indecision about our romantic life. We may have a Three of Diamonds Pluto Card one year and this will transform our worries about money into a positive. Thus financial ideas can be implemented to reduce stress. Moving on is basically part of life they must deal with at some point in order to attain peace and contentment. The notion of peace and contentment is difficult for every odd-numbered Birth Card. As mentioned, odd numbers are imbalanced and thus seek balance. Odd numbers are seen as masculine, creative and always moving. Regardless of actual gender Threes exhibit creativity and self-expression. Peace comes from action or accomplishment in the material arena. This leads them to return to self. Threes are idea people because their thoughts and feelings have to find a suitable outlet or worry and indecision will come about. Threes have a desire for self-expression. Threes are akin to the Gemini and are versatile and often loquacious. They get along with different kinds of people and are interested in different cultures and concepts. They are very inventive and can be good problem solvers. If it is an idea you seek, talk to a Three. They are loaded with ideas but often do not do anything about them. For success in creative areas the Three has art, music and writing. These also bring an inner satisfaction. This fulfills their desire for creativity. Should they become bored in one area, they simply move on to the next. For Threes, this works exceedingly well. However, they must be cautious that projects are completed or they will be failures. Romance is enticing to Threes. The 5th house in astrology has energy pertaining to creativity and self-expression. It also relates to love and romance. There is a strong relationship between Threes and the 5th house relative to fulfillment. It is logical that those with the wonderful creative gifts have the strongest needs for romantic and sexual delight. Looking at the overall picture you find a deep curiosity and yearning for new experiences and variety. Thus, Threes make wonderful lovers but are, perhaps, not the best marriage partners. Boredom might set in..
