

Birth Cards: Queens

Queens are aware of their power and authority. They are second in command and are very able to rule the kingdom, but in a different fashion than the King. Because Queens are second in authority to the Kings and therefore very strong; in some cases stronger than the King. Queens are more compassionate and helpful. They are wise from the experience in previous lives. Consequently, in some areas, Queens excel. In terms of love karma, Queens often have difficulty and this is frequently true with the Queen of Diamonds and Queen of Clubs. They sometime have difficulty in marriage or other personal relationships. Queens want to transcend themselves and help others. Queens fulfill a motherly function and are excellent at helping and nurturing people. They give food and security to assist people. Both male and female Queens are famous for loving children, whether they have any themselves or not. Sometimes they hold on too much to loved ones and do not let them go and develop. One of their biggest challenges is to leave behind the need to nurture. Sometimes they feel like they have no purpose in life which is one of their biggest challenges to overcome. Queens are helpful in significant ways. They make excellent doctors, teachers and counselors. They are especially good at rallying people for a good cause. They radiate love to all. Queens can be victims of those who manipulate them if they have no children. In addition, if childless there can be relationship problems. Numerologically, the Queen is number 12, which becomes threes and produces the initial cards for the Queen. Diamonds and Clubs, in addition to Threes, are in Mars. Unfortunately it is possible that insecurity and indecision in personal relationships will be prompted by three-energy, particularly in regard to the Queen of Clubs and Queen of Diamonds. All Queens have a creative urge stemming from Threes. Queen of Spades and Queen of Hearts are not as likely to produce tension because they have even-numbered Karma. Insecurity can result in associations and decisions. As the most powerful female card, males and females both display feminine qualities. Queens are romantic and fun loving, but this can produce uncertainty. The Queen of Clubs is an organized businessperson who is smart, temperamental and usually very active. The Queen of Hearts is akin to Aphrodite, the famous goddess of love and pleasure. She is a man's dream woman.
