The question is one of an ability to face inactivity or boredom. Tigers cannot handle it. Aries is more effective in this regard and, of course, that is one of the qualities of Aries. They can deal with the tiresome effectively. It is not that Tigers only want to have fun. But they do enjoy it and Aries are a bit more realistic in that regard. There is, therefore, a tugging on the Aries-Tiger soul, but this still does not rein in their ability to accomplish things. The picture created when we think of a dragon-tiger can be one of a cartoon or, more seriously perhaps, a tattoo. Tigers take risks while dragons are the stuff of children's songs. Buddies striding down the road together, full of plans and ideas represent the essence of an Aries-Tiger. Tigers, of course, are known for attacking and that is what this combination does. And they have lots of methods for this. Consequently, the issue in question pertains to successful people. Everyone knows that Aries are serious folks. They do not undertake projects lightly. Like the large cat it is, Tigers play with their prey and sometimes forget it. They attack and carry through. Aries might not have Tiger-eyes, but they are serious; much more serious than tigers.

Romance: There is not much interest in a one-person relationship here. There could be a lot of changing of partners, flirtations or even extracurricular activities. It is not meanness or cruelty. It is a matter of moving on. This is a beautiful, fun, innocent and youthful combination. It is a sort of mixture of the ridiculous and the sublime or perhaps the tragic comedy. They are two aspects that should not go together but do. The result is a very popular and sought after person. In romance the new and the exciting and challenging are needed.

Relationships: And there are many choices for this combination in terms of romance. Probably first on the list are Leo-Dogs or Sagittarius-Dragons or Horses. A very close second are Aquarians, Dogs, Boars, and Aquarians born in Dragon. Some combinations it is wise for you to avoid are Libran Buffalos, Capricorn Monkeys, or Capricorn Snakes. Cancer-Snakes are not a good idea either.

Family Life: This combination is also loyal and dedicated to their family. The children of this combination are not any more moved by such rational explanations than any other children, yet they do turn out to be quite lovely in their own right. Everyone, including other parents and teachers, like the children of this combination. There are huge and good topics pertaining to the family associated with this combination. It is not exactly the perfect middle class family, but it tends in that direction, along with sprinklings of liberalism. The result is a person who not only remembers all holidays, birthdays and anniversaries, but also is reasonable. And reasonable includes the child rearing philosophy that you can reason children into good behavior or achievement. This combination is the mother at the supermarket explaining to her screaming two year old why candy is bad for her health.

Likelihood: Their attitude about money actually helps in this regard; helps, at least, in terms of happiness. They, as a matter of fact, do have abilities to see to it that they are taken care of. They execute their plans and build their castles, right here on earth. Aries-Tigers are a really interesting combination because, for starters, they are not money signs. They can get by without money and it is not all that important in their value system. However, they are go-getters and want to accomplish things, make their lives better and bring their dreams into reality.

Famous Aries/Tigers include: Alee Guinness, John Fowles, Jerry Brown.
