The home of this combination is neither a castle nor a fortress, but it is where they like to be. That does not mean however that all of their time is spent there. They are quite social creatures and love to visit and party with friends. This combination has essentially no clash at all in terms of its fundamental nature. The Cancer-Rabbit is a home-home combination. That is where their heart and everything they value resides. Because of the value they place on their home it shows care, style, comfort and detail. It is lived in, but it is attractive. They can talk of days gone by and without a trace of nostalgia, but with a strong sense of place and history. This perhaps stems from their very deep love of their home and a curiosity about how others feel about theirs. So, while they may not always be found at home, their interest, and of course, their heart will always be there. They enjoy good conversation and comfort. While there is not a melancholy characteristic about them, there is kind of an interest in history and a longing to visit the past.

Romance: This combination cares for family as well and all the ornaments that go on the family tree. For those who want love, there is no better choice to consult than this combination. Perhaps more than any other combination, the Cancer-Rabbit knows what love is. They care about it so much that they love, love itself. They are not interested in passing flings or short-lived infatuations. They do care about one-night stands or even one year stands. They need, want and know love. They also know how to give it. A home for their family that is comfortable physically and emotionally is in the cards for them.

Relationships: In this combination Aries, Libra or Capricorn-Tigers, Dragons or Roosters are not recommended. Concentrate on those signs and combinations interested in the home and the family. Taurus, Virgo, Scorpio and Pisces Rabbits are fine choices for this combination. Among those sign, the best are Rams, Dogs and Boars.

Family Life: This combination enjoys their home and when seen there, it is obvious in their smile. Finally, the Cancer-Rabbit is a fantastic parent. They are loving, caring and sharing. They tend to push their children a bit, but it is done with a loving touch. Yes, it is the home that is the main focus once again. If a person is looking for a Cancer-Rabbit, the first place to look is there. Their home is not something from the army 5 minutes prior to inspection, but it is totally and completely organized. The motto of this combination is obviously a place for everything and everything in its place.

Likelihood: This combination can be nearly anything they choose. Education is a good choice, but so are things pertaining to the written word such as printing or writing itself. Finally, they are excellent and responsible employees. They are as loyal at work as they are at home and always interested in new developments in their chosen field. This is the ultimate homebody. That means that they are happy and busy there. They have endless projects they love. The word boredom is not in their vocabulary. None of this is to say that their talents are only domestically oriented.

Famous Cancer/Rabbit: Neil Simon.
