

Chinese and Western Combinations

Gemini (Horse) Month

Combination with Monkey Year:

"Reflect" Mercury, Air, Mutable

"Arrange" Yin-Positive Metal

Characteristics: Leadership, Silliness, Wit, Ruse, Opportunism, Zeal, Deceit, Improvisation, Cunning, Loquacity, Stability, Self-Involvement, Self-Deception, Dexterity, Superficiality, Inconstancy, Perspicacity, Indecisiveness, Flexibility, Performance, Versatility, Quick-Wittedness, Glibness, Impatience

Both the Gemini and the Monkey have an abundance of energy and are very spontaneous. Of course the Gemini is a talker and the Monkey exacerbates this in this combination. Part of that comes from the performing Monkey element in the combination;: shameless show offs of the most blatant type. The Gemini-Monkey combination is a bundle of energy mixed with a bundle of loquaciousness and large doses of party animal thrown in for good measure. They are a human perpetual motion machine that shuns sleep in favor of action. This penchant for the big show carries over to the home and throughout their lives. All this is perhaps the origin of the saying, more fun than a barrel full of monkeys. That many, however, might be a bit much for those of us who are mere mortals in this area. If you want a party, an extravaganza or even a presidential inauguration, this is the combination for you. It will all go off without a hitch and it will go down in the annals of people's lives as the most successful and the most fun ever. They love it and they can plan it.

Romance: Flying to Paris for the weekend is not out of the question for this combination. If, in the unlikely event that this combination is not that affluent; they will serenade their lover under their bedroom window and throw chocolates at them. This combination can sweep people off their feet and they do it with passion and creativity. This combination is the ultimate romantic and perhaps the most highly charged one you have ever met. In love and in the bedroom, they tend to get their way. That is true not so much because they are obnoxiously demanding. It is true because they are so skilled at seduction and so creative in their methods. If there is money involved, the Gemini-Monkey will spend it on romance.

Relationships: Poor choices for this combination include the Virgo-Tiger or Snake, a Sagittarian Buffalo, Snake or Dog. Perhaps the worst of all is the Capricorn-Snake. A couple of good romantic choices for compatibility are the Libra-Rat or Dragon. Additionally there are Aries-Dragons and Monkeys as well as Leo-Rats and Aquarius-Dragons among the possibilities.

Family Life: Comfort, as it is with many Gemini, is the key for them, although they do not object to stylishness as long as it is not flashy. Classic refinement is more to their liking. This combination makes good parents, but they tend to be on the serious side and insist on good manners. Gemini-Monkeys enjoy the home. In their case, however, home needs to be plural because they frequently like more than one. Several, in radically different environments, would be best. That desire is not necessarily a part of their inclination for showmanship; at least not relative to showing off class or status or finances.

Likelihood: This combination likes change and they like flexibility. In fact, they might like it more than any other combination. Being entrenched in a position that does not allow variety and diversity is not for the Gemini-Monkey. They do not generally make good accountants. The seriousness this person possesses actually is ingrained deeply in their being. It is, in many ways, a gift for them. The gift is one that gives them an aptitude for doing intellectual jobs that require detail and exactitude. But this should not be taken to imply that they want to remain in one position for their entire life; say a scientist or automobile designer.

Famous Gemini/Monkeys: Paul Gauguin, Marquis de Sade, Ian Fleming, Duchess of Windsor.