This combination is a mover and at times they are a shaker as well. Dragons are not known for being afraid to put themselves forward. What they are known for more often than not is bragging. Mixing this with the watery home of the Pisces is a plus. The Pisces-Dragon places a significant importance on advancement in their profession and in life. They are a combination of movement. Personal advancement, traveling, jogging, swimming or career change are used to fend off edginess and nerves. A deeper awareness arises in the combination and lets the Dragon element have a more realistic view of themselves. From the Pisces side of his nature, this subject gains perspective. The Dragon can come back down to earth because of the addition that the Pisces has made. They need to learn how to keep their nose to the grindstone. Practice may not exactly make perfect, but it helps. This combination needs to develop a better understanding of that basic principle of life. Overall, but perhaps in insufficient quantities, this mixture is relatively workable and has some potential. There is a danger, unfortunately, of the combination becoming a free-floating individual adrift in a sea of purposelessness, but this is unlikely. As a way of life there are always some dark clouds present, however.

Romance: There may be some drama in the life of this individual but they know about love. When they love and when they are loved in return, it is permanent. They know how to forgive the transgressions of their partner as well, because they always remember the wonderful parts of their history. Pisces-Dragons can be fickle and inconsistent in matters of the heart. Part of the cause of this is that they are often quite attractive. This can make them rather conceited since they are so popular. There is some assistance because this combination has rather large doses of sentimentality. That means that even though there is a strong likelihood that the Pisces-Dragon will go wandering off here.

Relationships: For compatibility there are some choices that are not particularly good including the Gemini or Virgo-Rabbit In this combination. Virgo and Sagittarius-

Dogs are not good either. The Virgo-Boar and Sagittarius-Buffalo are out of the question. Dragons have a reasonable number of choices for love and romance. Excellent selections are Cancer, Scorpio and Capricorn-Monkeys for a start. Taurus, Cancer, Libra and Scorpio-Tigers also make the list of excellent picks. The positive side of things continues with Taurus and Scorpio-Snakes. And, there are also Scorpio and Capricorn-Rats to choose from.

Family Life: This combination loves to look at the houses and furnishings in home decoration magazines and they have their dreams. Often though, they wait so long that those dreams of a lovely home with a pool and a mountain view but easy distance to the beach will never come about. They are too late for the party. There are never regrets though, so all of this sits OK with the Pisces-Dragon. This combination, of course, loves and cares for their children. The Pisces-Dragon is not a homebody. They will likely live in an unassuming environment and have somewhat reasonable possessions. It is not that they do not want a nice place to live; it is just that they spend a lot of time either being in other people's homes or traveling.

Likelihood: This combination has a lot of energy. But they often let others run around to assorted seminars, workshops and continuing education classes while they spend time in another place in their own minds. The best sort of work for them is totally independent work, perhaps done from the home. As bosses, something they are very unlikely to be mostly because they have no interest, they are very pushy and somewhat aggressive. The Pisces-Dragon is an idealistic dreamer from another world. A large portion of their psyche does not care that most of this particular planet is ambitious and seeking fame and fortune. Many of them are just happy to have a very relaxed attitude in terms of profession. They are not lazy and they certainly do not lack in intelligence.
