In this combination the Pisces helps guide the Horse into a more humble individual and in the end they are extremely nice; in fact they are too nice. The reason for this is that the Horse influence intensifies qualities in the Pisces with imagination, sympathy and acceptance. The problem here is though, that the Pisces-Horse are sometimes too self-sacrificing and they put their own needs, wants and desires on the back burner. In the Pisces-Horse combination there is a smoothing and rounding off of issues that come from the generally self-centered Horse. The reason for this is that the Pisces influence makes this combination more aware of its psychic and humanistic qualities. Normally the Horse goes trotting off looking out for themselves and being terrifically autonomous. They simply overdo it when it comes to helping others. This individual has terrific potential if they are able to find a partner or friend who can help them reach their destiny. They do need, however, a guide or, in some cases, an easier way to success. They are a very gifted individual who just happened to need someone to help them find their way from darkness to light. This combination is somewhat shy and introverted. What they would like is popularity and they choose this goal over things like autonomy.

Romance: Partners of the Pisces-Horse should never exploit this incredible adoration and love. They are so shy that this person probably needs their partner to help make them a bit less introverted. To treat them right is to be assured of a lifelong partner who will never stop loving and worshiping them. They are totally reliable and loyal if treated well and not taken for granted. The Pisces-Horse is a fabulous, devoted lover. Their dedication is almost infinite. They know how to love and take care of their partner. The Pisces-Horse truly does care and will take care of those they love. Their love is not especially effusive because they are inclined to be shy. But they do worship their partner and have the highest regard for them.

Relationships: For compatibility there is a real chance that the Pisces-Horse will not do well with Rats in this combination, especially if they are Gemini, Sagittarius or

Virgo-Rats. Monkeys born in either Sagittarius or Gemini are not good selections at all and bring up the rear. The best choices for love and romance are the Libra, Scorpio and Capricorn-Tiger. Those combinations are superb love partners. More fine choices can be found in Taurus, Scorpio & Capricorn-Dogs. Good news continues with Taurus or Capricorn-Rams.

Family Life: The Pisces-Horse tends to live in their own mind so what surrounds them is of little consequence. They are excellent, loving mothers and fathers who enjoy doing things with and for their children. They want to understand children in general and realize that being with them is the best way to accomplish that. They are not the stay at home type of person who makes brownies and fusses over the style of their drapes. The Pisces-Horse is odd in the home department. They actually like to be at other people's abodes. This individual is not materialistic and has no interest in impressing other people. The Pisces-Horse wants to have a roof over their head and three square meals a day. They could not care less about lounging around on expensive furniture and admiring antiques vases or works by famous artists.

Likelihood: There is little chance of this combination ever becoming a boss. At most they might hire some teenagers to mow their lawn or a word processor to handle the new novel they have written. They are not in the least bit fussy or pushy with other people. The Pisces-Horse is a person from another world and as such does not care much for chasing money. They find the way some people do that, with all the stress in their life, rather humorous. Instead of business, which they are terrible at, they would much rather be involved in the arts in some way. If the gods of the art world, including the written word, are kind to them and they get famous, they can handle admiration with poise. Their shyness and desire to not get involved with trivial pursuits does not detract from their aptitude as a creative thinker.

Famous Pisces/Horses: Frederic Chopin, Mickey Spillane, Patty Hearst, John Irving.
