Characteristics: Complexity, Hypochondria, Pedantry, Ambition, Dilettantism, Prudence, Tact, Longevity, Suspicion, Magnetism, Intransigence, Secretiveness, Fanaticism, Mercilessness, Revenge, Inspiration, Discipline, Finesse, Sadism, Tenderness, Dedication, Squeamishness, Sovereignty, Virtue

This combination earns both respect and money and they know how to hold on to both. Part of the persona that the world sees is peaceful and sophisticated. Of course most people do not show all of themselves to the external world and inside the Scorpio-Rabbit is someone who knows human nature well. The Scorpio-Rabbit in a sense is a severe person. That does not mean they are unfriendly or standoffish. It means they have a rather awesome presence. They impress people just with their persona. They are, consequently, able to overcome fear and meet difficulty straight on. The Rabbit brings kindness into the mixture and is a brave, humanitarian defender of the needy inside this combination. The timid Rabbit does occasionally bring in some fear, but the Scorpio generally overrides this in action. For starters they talk straight and need to be taken seriously. They can dance around difficult situations and put out fires before they get going. While there is nothing foreboding about them, they know the concept of dread and its causes. The balance they have and the straight walk that they walk is largely the influence of the Rabbit who gives them self-confidence. The Scorpio gives some balance to by adding daring.

Romance: The primary need for a mate for the Scorpio-Rabbit is as a kind of manager and executive security officer. They need management so they are able to get the important things done. Love for this combination is often born of respect. Being the spouse of this combination will probably involve an evolution of sorts; one that is hinted at, requested and indirectly pushed for by their partner. Scorpio-Rabbits need and care about love. They tend to go after the real McCoy fairly quickly and do not care to fool around playing the field. They have places to go and things to accomplish and consequently have no time for passing affairs or infatuations. This combination tends to be relatively faithful but can, on occasions, stray off the path. Generally this is not the cause of serious breakups or restarts.

Relationships: Totally out of the running for compatibility in this combination are Taurus, Leo and Aquarius-Roosters. The Leo-Rat would also be a mistake as a romantic partner. The best choice in the department of love and romance are Cancer, Virgo, Capricorn or Pisces-Rams. Dogs and Boars in those signs are good too.

Family Life: As parents, this combination is responsible and caring. Here too, however, deference must be shown to the way things are designed by the Scorpio-Rabbit. Above all is respect. This combination has a lot of social status and has probably earned it themselves with diligence and a good work ethic. The Scorpio-Rabbit, while not a rooster, does rule the roost at home. It is strictly their domain and things will be done their way. This rule is true in spades when it comes to the living room of the house. It totally belongs to them. As for the remainder of the home, it is distinguished and has the imprint of the Scorpio-Rabbit. While some individual choice will be allowed in rooms other than the main room, everything must match and fit and be refined. The goal is a home that is more or less synchronized.

Likelihood: As employers they can, to put it kindly, be testy. They can also have a very sharp tongue. Positions they might be good at run the gamut from music to science and religion. This combination was meant for a responsible position. They desire to help others and the concern that they have for their peers and all members of the group is very admirable. They are kind of a no frills and get the job done right individual.
