

Chinese and Western Combinations

Taurus (Snake) Month

Combination with Dragon Year:

"Possess" Venus, Earth, Fixed

"Take Charge" Yang-Positive Wood

Characteristics: Dissatisfaction, Volubility, Infatuation, Pluck, Mistrust, Braggadocio, Jealousy, Success, Rigidity, Strength, Good Health, Intractability, Enthusiasm, Gluttony, Logic, Patience, Complacency, Sensuality, Languor, Sentimentality, Ardor, Prejudice, Determination, Industry

This combination does not live in a world of opinions, but rather in a world of facts and they are the ones who determine what precisely a fact is. The life story of this combination is often filled with surprising twists and turns. Power meets skill in the Taurus-Dragon. Probably no other combination is more energetic, powerful and skillful than this one. No one has neutral feelings about this combination. They either worship the ground they walk on or despise them. The slightly unusual dialectic of this combination is a very common sense oriented individual combined with a foolish, egocentric attention seeker. They always get by in life and frequently have the wanderlust. Their time clock is their own and they are not about to set it according to someone else's. They want to do things their way and in the end, they always do. Occasionally people at their class reunions might wonder where they are but no one knows. Then, out of the blue, the person might return to his hometown as a highly successful founder of an Internet or software enterprise.

Romance: In this combination they remember anniversaries and Valentine's Day. They are the type who loves to be with their partner. This is a wonderful combination for love and romance. For starters, the dragon is highly romantic. On top of this, in the Taurus, there is a deep loyalty and faithfulness. The result is that the Taurus-Dragon deeply loves and cares for their partner.

Relationships: What is not possible, but rather certain, is that the Taurus-Dragon is extraordinarily jealous and craves attention. If you do not give them the attention they need or give the slightest hint that there is some interest other than them, there will be a price to be paid. In general, however, this combination is a true-blue partner. This combination is, for the most part, faithful and loyal to their partners. They are, however, human, and can be led into temptation like anyone else. They are not likely to have a flashy, headline making adulterous affair. But straying is a possibility under the right circumstances.

Family Life: In this combination perhaps a bit of caution needs to be in place with Leo and Scorpio-Buffalos and Dogs, but they are not actually dangerous. Furthermore, while Aquarius-Oxen and Dogs might be good friends, romance is probably not advisable. Dragons can get along with almost anyone and that includes the powerful and skillful Taurus-Dragon. Romantically speaking, nearly every combination is possible.

Likelihood: The love in this combination is most certainly of the give and take variety because Dragons are, deep in their hearts, very affectionate by nature. While they do not appear to be the overly affectionate huggy, kissy types with their children, they are deeply moved and interested in everything they do. Even though this combination has the wanderlust, they are a good spouse and excellent with the children. The Taurus-Dragon takes excellent care of those that they love and in return there is love and respect aplenty.

Famous Taurus/Dragon: Salvador Dali, Sigmund Freud, Jean Cabin, Shirley Temple, Yehudi Menuhin.