

Chinese and Western Combinations

Taurus (Snake) Month

Combination with Monkey Year:

"Possess" Venus, Earth, Fixed

"Arrange" Yin-Positive Metal

Characteristics: Leadership, Self-Involvement, Silliness, Wit, Opportunism, Jealousy, Zeal, Improvisation, Cunning, Deceit, Ruse, Stability, Ardor, Gluttony, Intractability, Patience, Logic, Loquacity, Complacency, Determination, Languor, Prejudice, Sensuality, Industry

The luck of this combination does not stop here, primarily because there is a solid nature to this character. Rather than use their Monkey nature for monkey business, it is more likely that this combination uses it for balance. To be sure, they are human and thus capable of emotional issues like others. But they seem to have the knack of bouncing back faster than most. Most Monkeys are tricky, slick and quick on their mental toes. The Taurus-Monkey has put away its bag of tricks and is not likely to get it out. It is, of course, the settling Taurus influence that does this. They are engaged in their world, have love and romance as well a tragedy in their lives. They know who they are and they know where they are. They do not reside in Fantasy Land and they have no desire to pay it a visit. This combination suffers emotionally like anyone else as the Taurus aspect of his or her nature indicates. But they are well grounded and have a common sense about them. When they fall, to whatever emotional issue it may be, they get back up, dust themselves off and carry on. The grounding also provides a strong sense of reality.

Romance: This combination has a high regard for other people and respect for others is part of their nature. In return, they expect to be respected equally. How all of this plays out in terms of being faithful, varies. What is not in question is that the Taurus-Monkey will be fair. The Taurus-Monkey is loyal and loving. They make excellent friends. They can and do love but their love comes with a condition. They are not willing to threaten their own personal liberty and they will not be involved in relationships that do. Their perspective is not one-way and they are certainly willing to allow their partner the same freedom.

Relationships: A very good choice for this combination might be a Pisces-Rat. Scorpio-Tigers are in the mix too, but that probably would not last long. Bad choices are the Leo-Buffalo, Tiger and Horse. Other combinations that value respect, and are consequently good matches, are Capricorn and Pisces-Dragons as well as Dragons and Monkeys. Additionally Cancer, Virgo and Capricorn Rats are good.

Family Life: There is a possibility they will not be parents, but if they are, they are dedicated and very caring. They are also good providers. Being dedicated, furthermore, this combination would do nearly anything for a family member as a child, nephew, niece or anyone else. This combination can be excellent at parenthood. Being monkeys, they are, of course, playful. Taurus-Monkeys make excellent relatives and are great fun for kids, playing with them, taking them places, giving the gifts and being happy to be one of them.

Likelihood: Regardless of what they do, they will probably do well and they will probably be financially successful too. They are not afraid to work hard and they enjoy helping others. The financial success they will probably enjoy is good, because they also happen to be good at spending money. It is not that they are wasteful; it is just a corollary of the other things mentioned in relationship to the character of this combination. This combination is very well rounded in nearly every part of life. They are excellent at making money, making friends, doing things and learning things. Because of this they might be very good at jobs in public relations or sales.

Famous Taurus/Monkeys: J. M. Barrie, Leonardo da Vinci, Harry Truman, Sugar Ray Leonard, Jill Clayburgh, Pope John Paul II.