"Conquerer" Yang-Negative Metal

Characteristics: Service, Conservatism, Humor, Chic, Crankiness, Negativism, Decorum, Resilience, Reserve, Enthusiasm, Courtesy, Practicality, Snobbery, Candor, Bossiness, Meticulousness, Nit-Picking, Dissipation, Boastfulness, Discrimination, Lucidity, Cockiness, Blind Faith, Pedantry

This combination is acutely aware of their position in society and their resolve will push them to attain class; very high class. They compulsively strive for the finer things in life so they can be displayed as a show of membership in the upper crust. The Virgo-Rooster is one of the most determined combinations on the planet. Virtually nothing can stop them on their march to triumph. Resolve is this combination's middle name and money is at the top of their priorities. This is especially true if they grew up in a needy family. That motivation carries over to them craving social standing. They have a knack for minutiae and are excellent in discovering what the actual facts in a given case are. This is not only helpful for them but is useful in a broader context. The source of this area of their character is their intelligence. . They are sly. Coupled with this is discretion. They, along with members of their group, have the ability and wherewithal to pull off major deceptions. They are the type of person who knows useless and unusual facts. They are able to solve obscure mathematical puzzles. Finally, lurking in the background of the Virgo-Rooster, under the surface, is a native craftiness

Romance: Love is defined the way they mean it and that dictates that their partners have a high regard for them. While they do not enjoy inflicting pain on the person they love, they will push harder than most to get their way and that, at the very least, can be uncomfortable. Love and romance are not easy for Virgo-Roosters. While it is true that they desire to be seen as having status, their intelligence keeps them from being overbearing in ordinary daily situations. They do want to be liked, after all. Romance, however, is another matter. For starters, they are controllers and want things done their way.

Relationships: Out of bounds for this combination are Gemini, Sagittarius or Pisces-Rabbits as well as Sagittarius-Roosters. To be totally avoided is the Pisces-Dog. The best choices are the Taurus, Cancer, Scorpio or even Capricorn-Snakes. Among these, Snakes are the best. Also great picks in the area of romance are the Taurus or Capricorn-Buffalo as well as the Capricorn-Dragon.

Family Life: The décor represents a repository of artifacts or a peculiar second hand shop. Clearly it is difficult to have children roaming around among huge antique vases and exotic Thai musical instruments. This is a home of a singular person. An old cat or a medium sized well-behaved dog might be around, but there will be few if any jungle animals masquerading as children. The home of the Virgo-Rooster's is what might be expected from an absent-minded professor of classics. It is messy but not dirty. Books are the first thing that will be noticed and they are all over the house. Many of them are open or face down marking a page.

Likelihood: This combination is probably suited best for a closet archeologists or curators of museums. Professions like that provide both money and great personal satisfaction; and, of course, status. When speaking of the opera, the Virgo-Rooster immediately comes to mind. They do not want drama in their lives, but they love drama on the stage. Run of the mill jobs will not pay for the home on or in the canyon where nature is visible but a lovely curvy road leads to the big city in fifteen minutes.

Famous Virgo/Roosters: Cardinal Richelieu, D. H. Lawrence, Elia Kazan, Ben Bradlee.
