Rams are considerate; they reflect before action, and are trying not to hurt somebody else's feelings. If Ram inadvertently emotionally wounded someone most likely Ram would fess up and do the best to achieve atonement. This is a characteristic that sees Ram through the daily challenges that life offers. Empathy is very important to Ram people and they cherish the approval of people they respect. But Rams sometime demand too much attention and force too much attention on those with whom they are close. Oftentimes their sensitivity is just too delicate for this world, and it's not unusual for a Ram to misread a situation. This produces a sense of insecurity that fills them with the need for love and the desire for being held and protected. Rams can simply walk into an intricate predicament in which they can easily become bogged down, with the result being that they begin to shy away from confrontation. They shudder at the possibility of being identified with an unpopular position. Ram people are very romantic, sweet and lovable and these traits combined with their gentle and caring nature make them very attractive to the opposite sex. Because of a tendency to be in charge and knowing what's best for the loved one Rams and their partners will find particular benefit in the Chi Kung posture, the Golden Turtle. When Ram discovers the rootedness of his physical being while being pushed and it will be much easier to let go of the emotional baggage that has been weighing so heavily on Rams spirit. Ram people are very creative and this should not be suppressed. They love beautiful objects and find great satisfaction in crafting harmonious art works. Family and colleagues may view their absent-mindedness as thoughtlessness, but Ram people would never intentionally try to hurt a loved one or friend. Rams compassionate, mothering nature strengthens the family ties. Boars and Rabbits make good match-ups for Ram people. Because of Rams emotional vulnerability The Inner Smile and Six Healing Sounds are required, not suggested, but required. Another view of people born under the Year of the Ram suggests that they simply want to be left alone to live out their lives in peace and harmony. Ram people are calm and tranquil, doing their best to avoid drama at every turn. These relaxed people are content to go with the flow and will avoid creating an upsetting scene whether at work or at home. While being easy-going is admirable, striving to evade conflict at all costs can be costly. Here's what a thumbnail sketch of Ram might look like: Ram people are elegant, charming, artistic, gifted and fond of nature. Ram people are also very delicate and very creative, but often insecure. Ram people are often dreamers, and sometimes can be very pessimistic and become over-anxious worriers. Sometimes Ram people are seen as lazy. Due to their indecisive nature, Ram people enjoy studying the esoteric, and always want to know more about the unknown. Therefore Rams are good at being astrologers or fortune tellers. Ram people are very romantic, sensitive, sweet and darling. In a relationship, they can be over-bearing and lazy, but with their gentle and caring nature, it is difficult for others to resist the Ram.
