

Twelve Chinese Animals

Snake

Years: 1905, 1917, 1929, 1941, 1953, 1965, 1977, 1989, 2001, 2013, 2025, 2037, 2049, 2061, 2073, 2085

Snake is Yang and Sixth Sign of the Chinese Horoscope.

Positive Traits: Discretion, Intuition, Compassion, Clairvoyance, Sagacity, Attractiveness

Short Comings: Extravagance, Dissimulation, Laziness, Presumption, Exclusiveness, Cupidity

Snake people can find accomplishment in elected offices. They are effective negotiators which is an essential skill for political success. Snakes are able to distance themselves when there is a predicament that everyone is very tragically and seriously involved in. Snake is not easily upset in such a state. With this posture of detachment the Snake supports others to lighten up and see the situation more clearly. This quality coupled with Snakes ability to slither below the surface and get to the core makes friendships both romantic and professional made with Buffalo people and Rooster people most propitious. Some Snakes are seen as the most intuitive, introspective, refined and collected of all the creatures in the Chinese Zodiac. The difficulty for Snake is the popular image of Snakes in the West: Eve and Adams banishment from the Garden orchestrated by the Satan Snake is a Christian image formed at an early age. The pejorative snake in the grass brands the person a betrayer of trust. In China a snake living in a human abode is seen as a good sign that the family will not want for food. In Chinese to call a woman a real snake is high compliment. Snake people are quick and sharp-witted and become very good with the family or business economics. They do not have to work too hard to maintain a healthy cash flow. They are natural leaders and attract the right people around them, especially the people who can help with the daily chores in order that Snake be able to concentrate on what is truly important: more beautiful things. Mysterious and attractive, Snake people can be very seductive. Do not cross a Snake; they will plot a delicious revenge. Snake can be lazy especially after a victory. Snakes can be jealous and unforgiving. They are not especially communicative and Snakes can be quite possessive when they've decided on a course of action to achieve a business or personal goal. Snakes can be intelligent advisors and have excellent instincts. Snake is a thinker who also likes to live well and is seriously concerned with affluence. Snake loves the arts, fancy adornment and gourmet meals and drink; however, their inborn poise and taste bequeaths a disdain of trivialities, narrow thinkers and chit-chat ananda. In times of confusion and trouble, the Snake is a pillar of strength because he maintains a presence of mind. The Snake can manage bad news and calamity with self-composure. Snake people have a weighty idea of what responsibility entails and keep all eyes on the goal. It will be this constancy of purpose coupled with a natural hypnotic charisma that could carry a Snake to the highest realms of power. Snakes emanate calmness and they understand other people but they sometimes are hard to predict. They find it easy to attain success and fame. They are selfish and would not mind using other people to get what they want. Snakes are very superstitious. Snakes have beautiful skin and Snake people should be sharp dressers.

