

Sun in Cancer/Moon in Leo:

Party Pooper

You know yourself well so you do not mind expressing your feelings and thoughts. Your lack of inhibitions along with personal appeal, self-confidence and magnetism, add to your success. You want the applause, credit and position that comes with success because your Leo nature needs it. Here we have Cancer with the bravery to be creative and Leo with the imagination and sensitivity. The result is a gifted mixture. Succeeding at anything you set out to accomplish is the result of your adeptness and talents and this provides confidence. Unlike most Cancers, you do not feel the need to guard your emotions. You believe that you have earned esteem, appreciation and sometimes adulation and you will be content only when this is provided. You almost certainly have very powerful creative drives. The arts have probably called you at one time or another during your life. There is a wide variety of things that interest you in this area including design, film, writing, music, and architecture. You are prone to taking setbacks so hard that you let a martyr complex consume you. Sitting back and moaning about the world not acknowledging your genius because it is so blind and callous is possible. Learning things from defeat is something you need to do. Experience and good advice can assist you and you need to know this or you will lose a bright future. Others are often attracted to you because you have a strong need for credence and thus your benevolence and magnetism draws them. Manipulation to gain an advantage from others is something to be cautious of. You are kind and generous but you always put yourself first. A couple of issues for you are conceit and pride. Criticism is something you have difficulty dealing with even though you are patient and strong-minded. Furthermore, there are problems you have taking the reversals or normal defeats that all talented people must run into in moving toward success. Part of this stems from stubbornness. No one can deter you at times from the feeling that you are right. You often wonder how anyone can question you. Your downfall might just be a high-minded inflexibility in your attitude towards change or learning. Your first defeat, after a super quick start and strong gains, can be crushing for you. Recovery from wounded pride and conceit comes very slowly in your case.
