

Sun in Gemini/Moon in Leo:

Headliner

You have a definitive nature that results from your slightly overblown sense of your own importance. You are relatively serious. You have a dual personality so figuring you out is not easy for most. There is kind of an executive nature about you that holds forth with advice and opinions on the one hand and a humorous and carefree person on the other hand. You make more of a show of being the boss than taking it seriously. Volatility, nervousness and self-expression are what we find in the Gemini. On the other hand, showiness, lavishness and drama are part of the Leo character. The combination is a running drama that is high-strung and almost absurd. What we have here is a melodrama of the outrageous that runs almost day and night. Fanfare and panache are your prime movers. Expressing your feelings and thought are a need residing deep inside you. You are a magnet made of charm, optimism and exuberance that is irresistible and this makes you very popular. Others can hardly wait to hear the next episode of your soap opera. Be more open to the contributions of other individuals and not so prideful and stuck on your own opinions. You are creative in your professional goals but you can do well in business because in the end you are actually down to earth. You have sales and promotion talents. You are loyal, responsible and dedicated in everything you do. You search for the perfect partner because you are very much a romantic as well as an adventurer. You want someone who is enthusiastic about life and shares your interests. You love to play the role of boss though, and enjoy showing off that side of you. It might be wise to go a little easier in your act because you can intimidate others to a point you may not imagine even though you do not mean to. You follow your own rules like most Moons in Leo natives and this means you often ignore the opinions and advice of others. You feel you are always right even though you are open-minded and generally listen to others who are reasonable in their approach. The feeling that you know what you are doing can bring about an impulsive and dangerous set of actions and when combined with your stubbornness and need to prove others wrong, you can do damage.
