

Sun in Leo/Moon in Cancer:

Gallant

You have a keen sensitivity and compassion for others. You are a creative, open minded and extremely emotional person and with the proper motivation you can achieve anything if you have the ambition. The one thing you lack, unfortunately, is precisely that. You may very well settle for far less than you are able to accomplish because of your total self-acceptance and inability to question yourself. You do not feel the obligation to verify your importance to the world like most Leos. Your best gift is accepting yourself. People think well of you because you think well of yourself and you are self-assured and confident. For your overall contentment, a tranquil and secure home life is very important. You need the reassurance and strength of a home base like all natives of the Moon in Cancer. You are very proud of your partner and children because you are family-oriented and they help verify your existence. You are aware of how to give and take in love and you are very romantic and idealistic. Before you eventually select a partner and settle down, your inborn curiosity will no doubt lead you through many romantic affairs. You are in jeopardy of adopting a feeling of self-satisfied complacency, since your nature does not have the hang-ups and inner turmoil that curse so many others. That which is pleasant interests you more than that which is gratifying and you are too easily contented. Therefore, your special abilities are unused and your creative possibilities often lie undeveloped and are not available for you or for others to tap. A strength and a weakness about you is your pride which helps overcome obstacles and self-esteem and reinforces your inner strength on the one hand, but it also leads to arrogance on the other hand. Your goals in life need re-examining and you need to ask whether your talents are really being used. Do you have a career that will help bring about a good future? Your mind's eye and originality are more matched to creative endeavors, particularly in the area of theater and the visual arts. However, you have the allure, instinct, and subtlety to give you an excellent business aptitude. Religion also attracts many Leo-Cancers and some find themselves drawn to charitable work, spending a lot of time helping the handicapped or needy. Psychology, counseling, teaching and running a charitable organization are excellent professions for Leo-Cancers.
