You place a high value on being rational and diplomatic and you try always to stay objective and just in your assessments. Scorpio fervor, aggressiveness and passion, however, smolder under that cool and calm exterior you present. You have an inner nature that is motivated and obstinate, and although your style might be that of peace, inside lies the motivation and intention of a warrior. Your combination joins peaceable and tactful Libra with forceful, enigmatic and aggressive Scorpio. All this means that you are a very multifaceted person. You probably show many of the qualities of the Libra outwardly and strive for peace, accord, and inner tranquility. With your friends and colleagues you are peaceful and thoughtful. At home in your environment, you are relaxed with yourself. Regardless of how delightful, naive, and youthful you seem on the exterior, when the time comes to take charge and exploit a personal gain, you can quickly come out as a critical, up-front, and astute individual. Less observant people are caught totally unaware and you usually end up shocking even your closest friends. Having conceived a goal or idea, you almost never rest until you have followed it through to the end. There is nothing idle or careless about you, but like all Libras, you really enjoy distraction and recreation. Being involved with others is something you have a strong need and desire for. You often reject the sound advice that others give you. It is a good idea to keep your mind open even though it is important to value your own personal views, especially in times of pressure. Your combination has the potential of academic and spiritual awakening on a big scale and great promise if it is pursued faithfully. With your good leadership you can assist in paving the way to self-realization as long as the approach is balanced. Presidents Dwight Eisenhower and Jimmy Carter are two examples of this combination. You most likely feel you have a purpose in life and are motivated to assist people and to change outmoded attitudes. You have strong political and diplomatic abilities because of your instinctive knowledge of what makes others tick. Your philosophy is generally realistic and careful, although you are a positive person by nature. You can be fairly closed to a differing perspective and at times people think you are intolerant even though you may think of yourself as open-minded.
